

Change in melting point as a function of the formate concentration

The higher the concentration of the potassium formate, the further the melting point of the water is reduced.